The 'Mystic Mac' is back and is ready once again to make his presence felt at the stage where it all began. In the highly-awaited, UFC 257 fight card – two of the most exciting mixed martial artists will battle it out at the Etihad Arena on Yas Island, Abu Dhabi to prove their supremacy in the lightweight category. This is a rematch between No. 2-ranked lightweight and former interim champion Dustin Poirier and former featherweight and lightweight champion Conor McGregor – UFC 257. Conor McGregor – 22-4 – has claimed that he's hungry as ever and is looking for more blood and vigour in the lead-up to fighting Poirier – 26-1-6 – on Sunday.

Poirier and McGregor met in 2014, with McGregor scoring a knockout in less than two minutes. The Irishman would go on to win the featherweight and lightweight championships while also retiring multiple times, entering the boxing ring against Floyd Mayweather Jr. and having several issues with the law. Poirier eventually made his own move to lightweight, finding the most success of his career and capturing the interim title in the division. All these years later, McGregor vs. Poirier feels like a fresh pairing.

Max Holloway destroyed Calvin Kattar last weekend in the first UFC event of the new year while Michael Chiesa beat Neil Magny in a special midweek show on Wednesday evening.

Now, it's time for the big one as McGregor makes his long-awaited return to the octagon.

McGregor beat Poirier at UFC 178 in September 2014 but both fighters have been through a lot since then.

They are now ready to go at it once more in what promises to be a thriller in the Middle East.
