Ottawa Senators at Winnipeg Jets odds, picks and prediction

The Ottawa Senators (1-2-1) travel to meet the Winnipeg Jets (3-1-0) at Bell MTS Place for a 10 p.m. ET puck drop Saturday. Below, we analyze the Senators-Jets odds and lines, with picks and predictions.

Senators at Jets: Odds, spread and lines

Odds via BetMGM; access USA TODAY Sports' betting odds for a full list. Lines last updated at 10:45 a.m. ET.

Money line: Senators +120 (bet $100 to win $120) | Jets -145 (bet $145 to win $100)

Against the spread/ATS: Senators +1.5 (-225) | Jets -1.5 (+180)

Over/Under: 6 (O: -105 | U: -115)

Senators at Jets: Projected starting goalies

Matt Murray (1-2-1, 3.79 GAA, .880 SV%) at Connor Hellebuyck (2-1-0, 2.00 GAA, .935 SV%)

Murray got off to a strong start with a 5-3 win against the Toronto Maple Leafs last Friday, but he has since lost two in regulation and one in overtime in his past three starts. He has allowed three or more goals in each outing, too, as the 26-year-old has yet to stand on his head and steal a game. He coughed up four goals on 26 shots Thursday against the Jets in Canada's capital city.

Hellebuyck is back on home ice for the first time since the season-opener against the Calgary Flames. He stopped 23 of the 26 shots he faced in that 4-3 overtime win, and he was the winning goalie in Thursday's game at Ottawa, making 28 saves on 29 shots in the 4-1 victory.

The JETS (-145) are a strong play on home ice, as they have won each of the first two meetings with the Senators. Winnipeg also won its only previous home game this season against Calgary. The Jets won't cost you an arm and a leg, which is nice.

RW Patrik Laine and C Jack Roslovic were reportedly dealt for Columbus Blue Jackets C Pierre-Luc Dubois Saturday, but they weren't going to be in the lineup, anyway. The absences didn't slow the Jets down in the previous two against the Sens.
