New York Islanders at New Jersey Devils odds, picks and prediction

The New York Islanders (3-1-0) are on the road to face the New Jersey Devils (2-1-1) at Prudential Center for a 7 p.m. ET puck drop Sunday. Below, we analyze the Islanders-Devils odds and lines, with picks and predictions.

Islanders at Devils: Odds, spread and lines

Odds via BetMGM; access USA TODAY Sports' betting odds for a full list. Lines last updated Saturday at 11:14 p.m. ET.

Money line: Islanders -160 (bet $160 to win $100) | Devils +135 (bet $100 to win $135)

Against the spread/ATS: Islanders -1.5 (+170) | Devils +1.5 (-200)

Over/Under: 5.5 (O: +110 | U: -135)

Islanders at Devils: Projected starting goalies

Semyon Varlamov (3-0-0, 0.33 GAA, .988 SV%, 2 SO) at Scott Wedgewood (0-1-0, 4.00 GAA, .886 SV%)

Varlamov IS human as he actually allowed a goal last time out against the Devils in Thursday's 4-1 home win. RW Nathan Bastian snuck one past Varly, snapping the goalie's 142:10 shutout streak to start the season. Not too shabby. He'll look to start a new streak on Sunday.

Wedgewood is expected to get the starting nod again, as G Aaron Dell is "in the process of joining the team," according to bench boss Lindy Ruff. Dell is needed with G Mackenzie Blackwood on the NHL's COVID-19 protocol list. The Devs are likely to lean upon Wedgewood heavily until Mac's return.
